

Summary

The Internet is a global network of computers connecting millions of people around the world and it is a revolutionary distribution channel.

First of all Internet was established by the US Department of Defense in the 1960s, because its objective was to create a computer network that would be immune to a nuclear attack.

Nowadays the objectives of the Internet are:

- Communication;
- Such as exchanging data among all over the world;
- Discussion about several arguments;
- Exchange information about some topics;
- The share of locations;
- The research of website for shopping;
- The spread of advertising slogans.

People can publish whatever they want on the Internet, because it is easy and cheap.

Talking about information, unfortunately, on the Internet, people can find false references, because they aren't checked or approved.

In my opinion, Internet will become a fundamental and necessary resource and the only way of communication for people all over the world. According to the app on the Internet, the Waze, the traffic info app which US police departments don't like.

Millions of drivers are using this app called Waze that , allows to exchange information about traffic and road conditions.

Three men in Israel invented Waze in 2008 and Google bought it for $1.1 billion in 2013.

Today, 50 million people around the world use Waze. The app collects and distributes information about traffic congestion, road accidents, construction zones, traffic cameras, police presence, hazardous weather and cheapest gas prices. It is now completely functional in 13 countries.

However the police complains because criminals can use it to locate and attack them. They start falsely reporting their locations to Waze.

Some people are more conscious that Waze is interfering with the privacy, and others think that the app can distract drivers, causing car crashes.

Despite these arguments, Waze continues to grow and grow.

In conclusion, I think that Waze is a good app, because it can help drivers to save time and money.
